if they had been the ones who had actually seen it. ~~~ Yhippa I like the book "What's Your RuSH?" by Lisa Johnson and others [1]. It's a comprehensive list of restaurants that is very common in Europe. [1] [----- Finnuccane I'd noticed that myself... I thought of it as marking the end of a chapter, not a whole book. I don't think I've ever actually started reading at the beginning again. But maybe I did. ~~~ losteverything When do books last end? I find myself trying to go into a book to find the end, not start ~~~ eklavya There is a fixed number of pages you read in a book or for how long the story goes, but if the story continues, there is no fixed end until you complete the last page. That's the idea. ~~~ Brockenstein I like this take on books and movies and tv. ----- mindcrime And indeed, as a way of getting into the general habit of starting at the beginning again, I find that having a large book of "BEGINNER BOOKS" at the local used bookstore really helps get me in the groove. I can check out a book like that, start reading, then the next time I stop by the store, pick up one of the "more advanced" books. So I'm constantly building momentum. But all of these beginner books have useful information on how to use Photoshop, and there's also info on other tools like Illustrator, After Effects, etc. ----- wanderr "Photoshop for Illustrator" was my gateway into the program. It was really easy to get started, and provided a good collection of the most commonly used tools at the time. I've been using and learning Photoshop for almost 20 years, but have only recently started learning Illustrator. In my mind I've moved from Photoshop to Illustrator, but I'm not sure what it looks

Q: DataReader refresh.NET cache with new lines I have a data reader who loads data from an Oracle database and then puts data in a cache. The cache goes in a listview and the listview is refreshed with a refresh button click. When the cache gets refreshed, the data from the Oracle database is loaded, but the data that is cached, the lines I had been working on before the refresh event are gone. I don't remember deleting any of the lines. Here is my code: Dim reader As DataReader = command.ExecuteReader Cache1.Clear() Cache1.Add("dataloader", reader) Cache1.Persist() reader.Close() Cache1.Evaluate(Cache1.Keys) DataSet1.Tables.Clear() gv_client.DataSource = Cache1.Keys gv_client.DataBind() DataSet1.Tables(0).Clear() 'here the new lines are lost when the cache gets updated DataSet1.Tables(0).Rows.Add() DataSet1.Tables(0).Rows("0").Item("FieldName") = TextBox1.Text DataSet1.Tables(0).Rows("1").Item("FieldName") = TextBox2.Text DataSet1.Tables(0).Rows("2").Item("FieldName") = TextBox3.Text DataSet1.Tables(0).Rows("3").Item("FieldName") = TextBox4.Text The three TextBoxes are populated with Oracle data (with new lines). When the user gets an update from the DB and the cache gets refreshed, the values in cache become blank (I think because the new lines are not in the cache). Is there some way to reload the cache with new lines? A: The answer is simple, I was just reading the data in an incorrect way. I was using a DataReader like this: Dim reader As DataReader = command.ExecuteReader While reader.Read
